Fifth Sunday after Pentecost

There were two men who lived across the sea from Jesus who were full of evil spirits. When Jesus came to them the devils cried out: “Are you going to get rid of us? If you are, let us go into those pigs.” Jesus simply said “Go.” The devils went into the pigs and made the pigs go crazy. The pigs ran over the edge of a cliff and fell into the sea. The local people did not think of the two men who Jesus saved from the bad spirits, but only thought of their pigs. So they told Jesus to leave their lands. Jesus did not argue with them.

You can read today's Gospel with your family. It is found here: Matthew 8:28-9:1.

Can you help the two men stay away from the evil spirits by guiding them to the safe and holy town where they can get a bible and learn to pray?
